Tracking system aims to spot food problems before they spread

Los Angeles Times

SAN JOSE, Calif. Inside a Silicon Valley company's windowless vault, massive servers silently monitor millions of heads of lettuce, from the time they are plucked from the dirt to the moment the bagged salad is scanned at the grocery checkout counter.

That trail can be traced in seconds, thanks to tiny high-tech labels, software programs and hand-held hardware. Such tools make it easier for farmers to locate possible problems—a leaky fertilizer bin, an unexpected pathogen in the water, unwashed hands on a factory floor—and more quickly halt the spread of contaminated food.

This Dole Food Co. project and similar efforts being launched across the country represent a fundamental shift in the way that food is tracked from field to table. The change is slow but steady as a number of industry leaders and smaller players adopt these tools.

Much of the farming community has yet to follow suit, and federal food-safety legislation is stalled in Congress. But proponents of this digital transformation said it was inevitable given public outrage over the recent scandal over contaminated eggs. They said technology could simplify the nation's highly complicated food-safety system, helping prevent or contain the harm caused by recalled food.

"The driving force in all this is the recalls," said Ashish Chona, chief executive of InSync Software in San Jose, whose technology is used by Dole. "A recall can bring a company to its knees. Everyone knows it."

In general, such trace-back systems work in a way that's similar to how Federal Express tracks its packages. On the farm, animals and crop sections are given a "smart" label with a unique identifying number. The label is then attached to a bin, crate or container used for transport.

Workers then can use a hand-held com-

BACKLASH

Some farmers and suppliers aren't sold on the idea of using technology to track food. They argue that such technology can be costly and gives only a partial snapshot of what's happening in a barn or field.

puter or smart phone to scan the labels and record key information, such as date, time, location, workplace temperature and which truck hauled the food away. The information is usually uploaded to a central online database, where it is stored and can be accessed via the Web.

Each time the food moves or is handled by someone new, the data can be updated and recorded.

"If computers can be used to track individual bottles of drugs throughout the supply chain in the pharmaceutical industry, then why not food?" asked Paul Chang, who heads IBM's traceability initiative.

Look, no 3-D glasses!

Los Angeles Times

Toshiba Corp. has come up with a new 3-D TV technology that's missing one key thing.

At a trade show in Tokyo the consumer electronics company unveiled its new line of 3-D televisions that don't require viewers to wear special glasses.

"It was sharp—sharp as any other 3-D you've ever seen," said software developer Auri Rahimzadeh of Indianapolis, who was at the CEATEC technology show last week. "It was bright, it was like watching a regular TV, but it was 3-D. It was freaky cool."

But bargaining with the 3-D devil is not easy.

Toshiba's new 3-D models may have cut out the glasses but the technology provides only a limited viewing area.

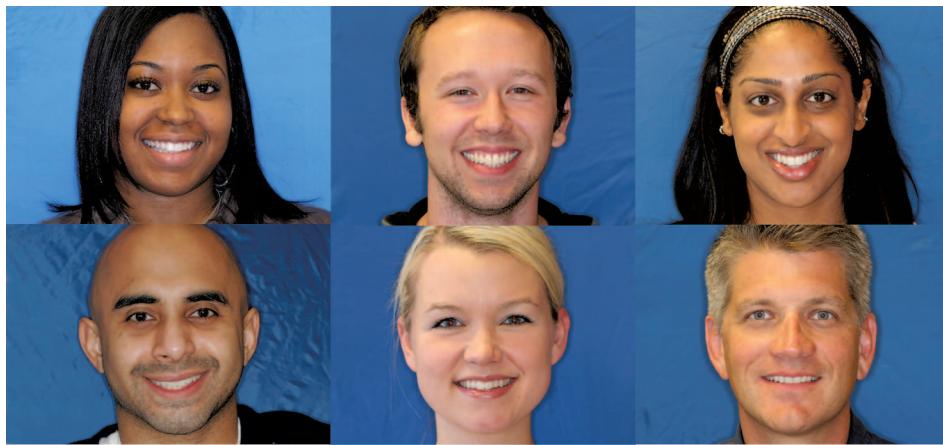

You can't just plop down anywhere in the living room and watch 3-D shows on these TVs. The sets have nine designated angles from which the format can be viewed. Otherwise, the screen is a blur.

"Toshiba had the nine spots where you could stand and see the 3-D marked out on the floor," Rahimzadeh said, describing the scene at the company's unveiling event. Not only did viewers have to be aligned with one of those angles, they had to stay there.

That's the catch with the sets that Toshiba will be selling under the name Glasses-less 3D Regza GLi. The first sets will go on sale in Japan in late December, the company said. There will be a 20-inch size for about $2,950 and a 12-inch size for about $1,500.

For the time being they will be sold only in Japan, Toshiba said. The company wouldn't talk about plans to sell them elsewhere.

Toshiba says the sets will be the first glasses-free, 3-D production LCD televisions to hit the marketplace.

Let's get this smile party started.

All is fair in sandwich wars

Perhaps I live in a fantasy world. But I like to imagine that Jimmy John's, Halsted Street Deli, Potbelly, my mom and others who have provided me with sandwiches over the years all love one another.

That when, say, Potbelly runs out of ingredients for its "Wreck" sandwich, the others rush over with enough individually wrapped meat portions to last the day and ensure that no Potbelly patrons go hungry, or no hungrier than they typically are after eating at Potbelly.

That all the city's sandwich makers share a powerful bond over the knowledge that they thrive in a business that depends on most of us being incapable of spending five minutes in the morning making our own sandwiches.

That, perhaps, they even gather monthly at a hotel conference room in Rosemont to share trade secrets and swap jokes about Quiznos.

Needless to say, Jimmy John's v. Halsted Street Deli has shattered my illusion. It seems what is so often said is true: We and sandwich makers live in a litigious society.

If you haven't heard, Jimmy John's is suing Halsted Street Deli because they each have turkey sandwiches that have "Tom" in their names. The sandwich names also both have the word Turkey in them, but from what I gather, just the Tom part is the issue.

Jimmy John's claims, according to Crain's, that both its trademarked Turkey Tom and Hunter's Club are far too similar, in name and ingredients, to Halsted Street Deli's newer Tom Turkey and the Hunt Club sandwiches.

It's true—the similarities between the sandwiches are downright eerie. For example, the Turkey Tom has lettuce and tomatoes ... and so does the Tom Turkey ... and so does, right, every other sandwich ever made.

Still, perhaps, Jimmy John's has a point. If your sandwich shop is going to have stupid names for its sandwiches, why not think of stupid names that are 180 degrees different from the place across the street's stupid names?

I'm no lawyer, but my guess is the ones Halsted Street Deli have hired have their work cut out for them. Indeed, their best bet, most legal analysts agree, is if Jimmy John's lawyers show up an hour and a half later to court than they said they would—and that they then accept a little weed in lieu of a settlement.

The real question, though, is whether this lawsuit will spark another round of sandwich wars, like the one that ravaged the city in '98.

Let's hope not. I'd like to think there is as much room in Chicago for all sandwiches—named Tom or otherwise—as there is room for more meat in the Wreck that I'll probably find myself ordering in about an hour. MARK BAZER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

33 MINERS WHISKED TO SURFACE IN RESCUE EFFORT SEEN AROUND THE WORLD

Reuters

COPIAPO, Chile Safe!

All of Chile's 33 trapped miners were rescued from deep underground in a special capsule Wednesday as an extraordinary two-month survival story many call a miracle triggered wild celebrations.

Luis Urzua, 54, who was the shift leader at the time of the collapse, was the last of the miners to travel through 2,050 feet of rock to the surface in a capsule barely wider than a man's shoulders.

Celebrations erupted across the country as he emerged to a hero's welcome above the San Jose gold and copper mine in Chile's northern Atacama desert, wearing his hard-hat and dark shades to protect his eyes after spending 69 days in a dimly lit tunnel.

"Viva Chile!" the crowd chanted, as Urzua emerged from the capsule, the light on his miners' hat still on.

Rescuers held up a sign in Spanish reading: "Mission Accomplished."

Urzua beamed as an elated crowd chanted, sobbed and waved red, white and blue Chilean flags. The miners set a world record for survival trapped underground.

"I hand the shift over to you and hope this never happens again," he said with a Chilean flag draped around his shoulders, hugging an emotional President Sebastian Pinera. "I am proud to be Chilean."

Rescue workers opened the capsule door and hugged Urzua, who had insisted throughout that he would not leave the tunnel until all the other miners were safely evacuated.

They are all now safe thanks to a meticulously planned rescue operation that went quicker and more smoothly than anyone dared to believe.

The rescue workers who traveled down the shaft to help evacuate them were next in line to be hoisted to the surface in the metal capsule, named Phoenix after the mythical bird that rose from the ashes.

Church bells rang out in Chile when the first miner was extricated and Chileans were glued to their TVs, proud of their nation's ability to save the men in a world-class rescue operation.

"This was the toughest match of my life," said Franklin Lobos, a former professional soccer player who turned to mining and driving a taxi to make ends meet, as he emerged from the mine.

The miners were whisked away for medical checkups and found to be in good health, except for one who has pneumonia and is being treated with antibiotics.

"This is a miracle from God," said Alberto Avalos, the uncle of Florencio Avalos, a father of two who was the first to emerge shortly after midnight.

Euphoric rescuers, relatives and friends broke into cheers—and tears—as the miners emerged to breathe fresh air for the first time since the mine caved in Aug. 5.

They were all initially believed to be dead, but rescue teams found the men 17 days after the collapse with a bore hole the width of a grapefruit.

The tiny hole then became an umbilical cord used to pass hydration gels, water and food to keep them alive during one of the world's most ambitious rescue operations.

Their story of survival captured global attention. Some 1,500 journalists were at the mine to report on the rescue operation, which was broadcast live around the world, including dramatic live images of the miners hugging rescuers who traveled down the shaft to their refuge deep in the mine.

Live from a half-mile under Chile

CNN

The two-day rescue of the 33 miners trapped in a northern Chile mine had all the ingredients for a riveting story and then some: a camera placed half a mile under the Earth's surface that would bring the world live images of a dramatic ending.

A live broadcast of the men being hoisted up enthralled the entire world.

People who had no connection to the miners cried. And they celebrated as though their own child had just been saved.

The story of rescue is not new. But this one was groundbreaking, like no other in history perhaps, because of a sudden, unexpected and dramatic live shot of a rescue capsule being lowered into the mine shaft, said Al Tompkins, senior faculty for broadcast and online media at the Poynter Institute, a journalism school for professionals in St. Petersburg, Fla.

The Chilean government, which provided the footage, had not told the news media in advance that the world would see images from the mine.

That moment left some news anchors speechless—for a few seconds at least—and drew instant comparisons to other milestones in TV news history such as the first moonwalk or missile fire during the first Gulf War.

"Wow. Look at this," CNN's Anderson Cooper said. "This is actually from inside the mine, a live image of the capsule entering the mine for the first time. Extraordinary. Extraordinary moment. If this does not give you chills, I'm not sure what will."

Chilean authorities proved they were as savvy in media as they were in engineering, Tompkins said. They installed video cameras that allowed everyone to see what was happening underground.

"I am amazed by the technology used in the Residents cheer Wednesday while watching the rescue of the last miners trapped in the San Jose mine on a large screen in a public square of Copiapo, Chile. rescue but I am just as amazed by the technology that allows me to see it live," Tompkins said.

It probably helped that Chilean President Sebastian Pinera once was the billionaire owner of Chilevision, which he sold earlier this year to Time Warner Inc., the parent company of CNN.

"There was no reason not to let all the eyes of the world see it," he said.

Cable news viewership quadruples

The drama of the Chilean mine rescue was a ratings bonanza for the cable news networks Tuesday night. CNN led the way with 4 million viewers during its coverage of the first miner being lifted to the surface about 10 p.m. CDT, according to thr.com. Fox News was next with 3.5 million viewers, followed by MSNBC with 1.1 million.

Normally, only 2 million people combined would be watching those three channels at that time, according to The New York Times. And the rescue of the final miner Wednesday night won't be the end for the networks.

Discovery is planning a special to air in the coming weeks that will center on "the triumph of the human spirit and the wonders of engineering," thr.com reports. PBS, meanwhile, has had a "Nova" crew on the scene since Sept. 5, the site reports, and will air a documentary Oct. 26 about the science of the rescue.

BUDGET RISES

DALEY UNVEILS CITY SPENDING PLAN, TALKS METERS AND TASTE

Chicago Tribune

Mayor Daley's $6.1 billion budget proposal for next year is up nearly $49 million from this year.

According to a series of placards set up in a conference room behind the City Council chambers, the mayor's final budget proposal lowers the number of city employees by 234, to a total of 32,922.

Daley, who is not running for re-election, will dip into the city's reserves to balance the budget without raising taxes or fees, according to aldermen who have been briefed on the plan.

Daley said he will have non-union employees take dozens of unpaid days off again this year. That equals a pay cut of 9.2 percent, he said.

In all, Daley plans to take use $273 million from the proceeds of long-term leases of the Chicago Skyway and parking meter system to balance the budget.

At the end of next year, there will only be $500 million left in Skyway proceeds and, significantly, only $77 million left from the 75-year lease of the parking meters. The parking meters were leased two years ago for an upfront payment for $1.15 billion, and the Skyway was leased in 2004 for $1.82 billion.

Daley also proposed asking Springfield to change the pension system for new police officers and firefighters, as was done earlier this year for municipal fund employees.

ALEX GARCIA/ TRIBUNE

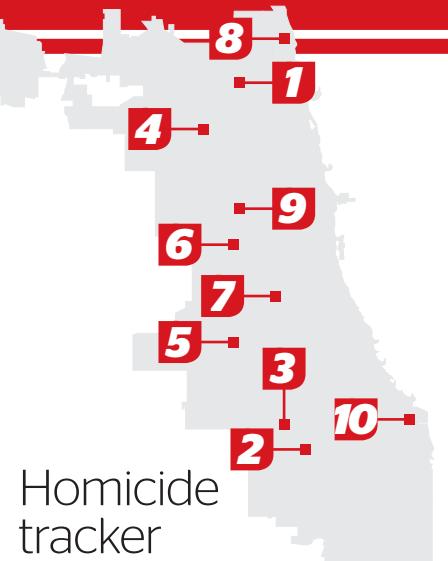

Aldermen applauded Daley four times during his speech: when he thanked President Obama for federal economic stimulus funding; announced that $90 million in tax increment financing funds, a public financing method, would go to shore up the schools budget; said the head tax would be charged on fewer employees; and talked about efforts over the years to end racial divisions. They also applauded at the end of the speech.

Daley said his budget will hold the line on spending, except for programs that

In an unusual spate of violence for October, seven people were killed in homicides in a two-day period early this week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

On Sunday, an 18-year-old man was shot to death in Gage Park; a 20-year-old man was fatally shot in Irving Park; and a 30-year-old man was stabbed to death in North Lawndale, officials said.

The next day, a 27-year-old man was shot to death in McKinley Park; a 38-year-old man was fatally shot in East Garfield Park; and a 53-year-old woman was shot to death in Edgewater, officials said.

Also Monday, a 2-year-old girl was pronounced dead after she sustained multiple injuries in South Chicago, including trauma, according to the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office.

Thirteen homicides have been recorded so far this month, according to data. Police recorded 36 homicides in October 2009, RedEye found. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

How does recycling fit into Daley's budget?

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Mayor Daley on Wednesday presented a $6.1 billion budget to the City Council, but the future of recycling seems unclear.

The city is looking for someone else to manage the blue cart residential recycling program.

"We will send out requests to outsource some functions that may be more suitably performed by the private sector," Daley said Wednesday at a special City Council meeting. "We are seeking to outsource recycling, festival management.

"Private firms might be able to provide the services much more efficiently. If these services cannot be provided at a lower cost by the private sector, we won't enter into any agreement."

It will be a couple of weeks before the city issues its official request for private companies to submit proposals on how to manage the blue cart recycling program, said Pete Scales, spokesman for the Office of Budget and Management.

Daley told the Chicago Tribune editorial board that the city has to do a better job educating residents about recycling.

"We're looking at the private sector and basically trying an alternative way of really going into the homes and showing people how to recycle. This is basic 101. I think that's what we have to do," the mayor said.

Currently, about 241,000 households have blue carts. The city had planned to give blue carts to 600,000 households (single-family homes and buildings of four units or fewer) by 2011, but the expansion was put on hold this year.

Next week, budget hearings begin, and aldermen will be able to ask specific questions about expenses and programs for next year.

Planners forecast Chicago in 2040

Chicago Tribune

Regional planners on Wednesday unveiled a sweeping vision for the Chicago area's future that calls for raising the state gas tax, increasing the region's slice of the state road funding pie and emphasizing the renovation of existing roads rather than the construction of new ones.

The plan also foresees reduced commuting costs, more parks and open space, and more locally grown food to combat inner-city "food deserts" linked to health problems, especially in African-American communities.

Called Go to 2040 and based on three years of research and public hearings, the plan was released by the Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning, a little-known agency responsible for land-use and transportation planning in the seven-county Chicago area. The agency's board, composed of elected officials and other appointees from throughout the region, formally adopted the plan Wednesday.

"Our goal today is to motivate you to act. Today must be a beginning and not an end," the agency's executive director, Randy Blankenhorn, told several hundred guests, including Mayor Daley and Sen. Dick Durbin, who gathered in a tent in Millennium Park.

In 2040, the plan predicts, the Chicago region's 284 municipalities will have about 11 million residents, 2.4 million more than today. While the plan says traffic jams will not get worse if its recommendations are implemented, there is no expectation that they will improve either—and they are now among the nation's worst.

Another fumble for Will County

Chicago Tribune

Prosecutors on Wednesday formally dropped charges against the Lynwood police officer accused of murder in last week's interstate shooting spree, marking at least the third time in six years that a major Will County criminal case has collapsed.

It also led defense attorneys to question whether there are systemic problems in how Will County handles high-profile cases.

"There were too many indications that they had the wrong guy," said Bob Odekirk, attorney for Lynwood police officer Brian Dorian, 37. "To go ahead and arrest him and charge him was outrageous."

The botched cases in Will County include the 2004 murder of 3-year-old Riley Fox, a 2006 hotel credit card fraud investigation that made headlines but was based on false information and the handling of the 2004 death of Drew Peterson's ex-wife Kathleen Savio.

Now that Dorian has been freed, police sources say they have no suspects or promising leads and may have damaged their chances of finding the mysterious "honeybee gunman," as the shooter is known. The case joins the 2007 disappearance of Plainfield mom Lisa Stebic and the 2008 Lane Bryant murders in Tinley Park as one of the most high-profile unsolved crimes in Will County.

Dorian was charged Friday with the murder of Roldano Alonso, 45, a construction worker rehabbing a home near Beecher. At a news conference the same day, State's Attorney James Glasgow said the investigation was ongoing and new charges could be filed Tuesday.

Instead, after Dorian's attorneys say they highlighted holes in the case during a meeting with two prosecutors on Tuesday, all charges were dropped.

Shhh! Metra plans to test 'quiet cars'

Chicago Tribune

Tired of encountering boorish train riders who conduct business on their cell phones? What about the shrill teens who yell across the aisle? Or the guy listening to a blaring movie soundtrack on his laptop?

In January, Metra plans to start test-running "quiet cars," where commuters will get a respite from cell phones, loud conversations and annoying electronic gadgets.

Metra scoffed at the notion in September when the Tribune wrote about the success of Quiet Commute cars in New Jersey. But the agency heard loud and clear from enough riders to reconsider.

"We can certainly be responsive to customers' needs if it's possible to make changes," spokeswoman Judy Pardonnet said Wednesday. "We're open-minded and willing to try it."

The October issue of Metra's On the Bi-Level newsletter asks riders for input, saying it isn't "opposed to quiet cars per se" but isn't sure how great the need is.

So Metra wants riders to "be thoughtful," the newsletter says. "Tell us whether you think it would work, and what cars should be considered."

Riders can send comments to onthebilevel@metrarr.com.

Can Chiropractic Help Me? HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

We are often asked, "What's the best way of finding out whether or not a doctor of chiropractic can help my problem?"

We believe the answer can be found in a complete chiropractic consultation and examination, including x-rays. And to help find out for sure, we will do a complete consultation and examination, including x-rays, if necessary, (procedures that normally cost $390 or more) for only $25.

We will make this special program available through October 31, 2010. The only exception to the offer involves personal injury cases (workers' compensation and auto accidents) in which there is no charge directly to the patient.

$25.00 Reg. $390 Value

Must present ad at time of appointment.

YOUR INITIAL VISIT WILL INCLUDE:

- A Private consultation with the doctor.
- X-rays, if necessary.
- A thorough spinal examination including orthopedic & neurological test.
- A confidential report of our findings.
- An explanation of our treatment procedure if we determine chiropractic can help you.
- A REFERRAL TO THE PROPER SPECIALIST IF WE DETERMINE CHIROPRACTIC CAN'T HELP YOU.

THESE CONDITIONS ARE SOME OF THE DANGER SIGNALS:

- Headache
- Arthritic pain by stiff neck
- Scoliosis (Curvature of the spine)
- Leg pain & numbness
- Arm pain & numbness
- Backache
- Fatigue
- Tension
- Whiplash injury
- Loss of sleep

Ft. Hood tapes released

4 FORT HOOD, Texas The shootings at Fort Hood were replayed in vivid detail in a military hearing Wednesday as the moans of the injured, the shouts and sobbing of people trying to escape, and the pop-pop-pop of gunfire sounded in the background of the tape of a call to an emergency operator.

In the second day of an evidentiary hearing for accused shooter Maj. Nidal Hasan, the Fort Hood courtroom opened a window into the November shootings that left 13 people dead and dozens wounded.

One man described how his eyes locked with the suspect just before he was shot in the head. Two people said they did not realize they had been shot until after the terror of the moment wore off.

Another witness said she took cover under a desk and heard the slow steps of someone she could not see walk past.

Hasan, an Army psychiatrist, is accused of 13 counts of premeditated murder. The Article 32 hearing is reviewing whether there is enough evidence to proceed to a court martial.

Also in the courtroom were several victims' family members, who remained very somber as the 911 tape was played.

THE ACCUSED

In the courtroom, Nidal Hasan at times looked down, closing his eyes and stroking his chin as he listened to the testimony. Otherwise he looked straight ahead. About 20 minutes into the hearing, a blanket was draped over his shoulders. Hasan (right) was paralyzed from the upper chest down when he was shot four times by police who rushed to the scene. Defense attorneys say Hasan has trouble regulating his body temperature because of his injuries.

Investigator beheaded

2 The lead Mexican investigator in the Falcon Lake case, Rolando Armando Flores Villegas, has been killed, his severed head delivered Tuesday in a suitcase to the Mexican military, officials said. Tiffany Hartley told authorities that her husband, David, was fatally shot Sept. 30 during a sightseeing trip the two were taking on Falcon Lake, which straddles the U.S.-Mexico border.

It's pronounced 'Dixit'

Gay marriage support up

American support for same-sex marriage is rising steadily, a new poll suggests. Among all Americans, backing for allowing gay and lesbian marriages rose from 29 percent in 2008 to 37 percent today, the Public Religion Research Institute announced Wednesday.

U.S. Hispanics live longer

Hispanics in the U.S. outlive whites by 2½ years and blacks by nearly eight years, U.S. researchers said Wednesday. They said the life expectancy for a Hispanic baby at birth is nearly 81, compared with 78 years for non-Hispanic white babies and just under 73 for black babies.

Dog bowl half empty? Your pet is a pessimist

6 LONDON If your dog destroys the furniture when you are away, it could be a pessimist, researchers have concluded.

A study has found that some dogs are natural gloom-mongers while others have sunnier dispositions.

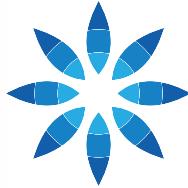

"We know that people's emotional states affect their judgments and that happy people are more likely to judge an ambiguous situation positively," said professor Mike Mendl, an author of the study and head of animal welfare and behavior at Bristol University.

"What our study has shown is that this applies similarly to dogs," Mendl said.

To measure canine psychology, researchers trained dogs to recognize that bowls on one side of a room contained food, while bowls on the other side were empty. They then placed the bowls in "neutral" locations between the two sides.

Just as happy people tend to see the positive in any situation, so optimistic dogs sprinted toward the bowl, expecting to find food, while pessimistic dogs hesitated or ran more slowly.

NASHVILLE 3, BLACKHAWKS 2

FACEOFF

Corey Crawford vs. Marty Turco

NET WORTH

WHO'S THE BEST MAN TO PLAY GOALIE FOR THE HAWKS?

RedEye

It's not a full-blown goalie controversy, it's just business as usual under the Joel Quenneville-coached Blackhawks.

As he did last season—and it turned out pretty well—Quenneville is mixing it up in the net, getting both goalies into the game. Simple as that.

"We wanted to give [Crawford] a home start and give him a chance after a win as well," Quenneville said. "It's early—this is only Game Four. We want to keep [Crawford] in the mix. Everybody is going to play. Marty is going to play a lot of hockey for us this year."

Still, some fans were crying "goalie controversy." Fortunately, RedEye has a way to address situations like this. It's called a faceoff!

EXPERIENCE

Crawford: Nine games.*

Turco: Nine seasons.*

STATS

Crawford: 2-3 career record, 1 shutout, .915 save percentage, 2.65 goals-against average.*

GOALIE MASK

Crawford: White with silver feathers throughout; Blackhawks circular logo on top; tomahawk "C" logo on front.

Turco: Two versions, one with a red background, one with a white background, but both incorporate his iconic gargoyle and the Hawks' Indian head and tomahawk logos.

NICKNAME

Crawford: Crawf, from his Rockford days.

Turco: Turks, Turkey.

WINNER
TURCO. Crawford's mask is cleaner and classier, but Turco has him in every other category. Both will be winners for the Hawks, we hope.

WINNER

Should you buy or sell?

Why is Warren Buffett worth $50 billion? Because the Oracle of Omaha lives by the wise maxim of "buy low, sell high." I may not be a stock broker, but I know that "buy low, sell high" is just as effective in fantasy sports as it is on Wall Street. Here are a few players you might want to secure or dump, Gordon Gekko-style.

Dr. Fantasy

redeyesports@tribune.com

SELL HIGH

Matt Forte, Bears running back: Take away two very long touchdowns and Forte's had a pretty substandard season, averaging less than 3 yards a carry.

Brandon Lloyd, Denver wide receiver: It's a nice story, but how much do you trust a 29-year-old journeyman whose previous career high is 733 yards and five touchdowns?

Peyton Hillis, Cleveland running back: Hillis has had an impressive start, but there's no way he's going to keep up this TD pace. A quad injury plus running cohort Jerome Harrison spell bad news.

Dustin Keller, N.Y. Jets tight end: He's a quality tight end, but he's not going to score 15 to 17 TDs as his projections suggest.

David Garrard, Jacksonville quarterback: He won't have more fantasy points than Matt Schaub for much longer.

BUY LOW

Maurice Jones-Drew, Jacksonville running back: Many owners have felt the sting of Pocket Hercules' lack of scores, but his luck should change. See if you can pry MJD from another owner.

Pierre Garcon, Indianapolis wide receiver: A bad hammy has hindered Garcon, but he's one of Peyton Manning's favorite targets when healthy. Get him while the getting is good.

Ryan Mathews, San Diego running back: After weeks of struggling with an ankle issue, Mathews is finally ready to take the starting job. This is the week to grab him.

Joe Flacco, Baltimore quarterback: His inconsistency has been maddening, but the tools for a big season are still there.

Aaron Hernandez, New England tight end: With Randy Moss out of coach Bill Belichick's hair, look for Hernandez to be a bigger part of Tom Brady's passing attack.

1 How should Bears fans welcome back Jay Cutler on Sunday at Soldier Field?	With a round of applause and, if they have it, an offensive line.	Probably not by slapping him on the head very hard.	Throw bottles of aspirin on the field—no doubt he'll need it.	With calls for him to have a quicker release and the O-line to step it up.	A fresh supply of smelling salts.
2 What'd you think of Ronnie Brewer's debut with the Bulls?	Didn't catch it. I was too busy sending out offensive e-mails to my co-workers.	He's not a guy you'll want to draft for your fantasy team, but he's a good role player.	Not quite Strasburg, but as long as he doesn't need Tommy John, I'm cool with it.	Bring back Kirk Hinrich.	He should get socks like Kyle Korver.
3 What should Niklas Hjalmarsson do during his two-game suspension?	Visit sick children in the hospital, and let them check him from behind.	Brush up on his "Mario Kart" skills.	Drown his sorrows in a bowl full of IKEA meatballs.	Catch up on "Jersey Shore"—and ignore any incoming texts from Brett Favre.	Come learn how to use the Green Screen at Fox.
4 If the NHL wants to stop hits that cause injuries ...	... they should give every player a Barbie Doll when training camp opens.	... they should turn the NHL into a real-life version of those hockey foosball games.	... they'll need to play in sumo suits. Hits hurt.	... it'll be slow like field hockey. Hockey is a fast, contact sport.	... two words: Bubble Wrap.
5 How will this latest Brett Favre saga play out?	He will agree to star in a remake of "16 Candles" playing the role of Long Duk Dong.	Wait, what? Sorry I'm distracted by a sext from someone named "STUD QB #4."	Who cares? Favre's been played out for years.	With him lashing out at those who spell his name "Farve" even after "There's Something About Mary."	Always thought Favre was overexposed, but this is ridiculous.

After the choke

On the 7th anniversary of the Cubs' collapse against Florida, where are the key players now?

Although no one in Wrigleyville will be celebrating, Thursday marks the seventh anniversary of Game 6 of the 2003 National League Championship Series, commonly referred to as the "Bartman" game.

The foul ball down the left-field line off the bat of Florida's Luis Castillo set in motion a sequence of events at Wrigley Field that ultimately led to an eight-run, eighth-inning rally that doomed the Cubs' best chance in 48 years of going to a World Series.

That game made heroes and goats out of many players. Where are they now?

Moises Alou

Then: He chased Luis Castillo's fly ball to the left-field seats behind the bullpen, reached for the ball but couldn't catch it as several fans—among them Steve Bartman—also tried to catch it.

Now: Is general manager of Escogido of the Dominican Winter League.

GETTY IMAGES FILE

Alex Gonzalez

Then: The Cubs shortstop made a critical error, in part leading to five more Marlins runs.

Now: Retired in spring 2007 and is pursuing a position in the upper management of a baseball team, whether at the Major League, college or professional level.

Mark Prior

Then: He was the Cubs' starting pitcher for the fateful game, and he threw a wild pitch immediately following the Bartman incident. Then he gave up a game-tying double to future Cub Derrek Lee.

Now: Signed a minor league contract with Texas in September.

Derrek Lee

Then: As a Marlin, Lee tied the game with a double off Prior, who was pulled after the hit.

Now: Signed with the Cubs after the 2003 season and was traded to Atlanta in August. Made the playoffs with the Braves, but they were eliminated in the first round.

Kyle Farnsworth

Then: Gave up the final five runs of the game, including an RBI to future Sox player Juan Pierre, who scored the first run for Florida and knocked in the last.

Now: Pitches for Atlanta.

Dusty Baker

Then: The Cubs manager said he would invite Steve Bartman to the victory parade if the team won the World Series.

Now: Won the NL Central this season with the Cincinnati Reds but was knocked out of the playoffs by Philadelphia.

» The Bears are bringing quarterback Jay Cutler back two weeks after he was sacked nine times and suffered a concussion against the Giants on Oct. 3. They'll do so behind a revamped offensive line. Chris Williams, tabbed as the left tackle of the future when he was drafted in 2008, has been moved to left guard.

» Brett Favre's latest problem is his elbow. Favre said Wednesday he would consider sitting out a game or two for the Minnesota Vikings this season if the tendonitis in his right elbow gets worse. Favre has started an NFL record 289 straight games, a streak he cherishes.

» Gilbert Arenas has been fined for faking an injury to keep from playing in the Washington Wizards home preseason opener. Coach Flip Saunders said Wednesday that Arenas was fined an undisclosed amount by the team for claiming to have a sore knee before the Wizards' game against Atlanta on Tuesday night.

I guess from here on out, the phrase "in case you've been living under a rock ..." is now "in case you've been stuck in a mine ..." And now, my picks.

Question 2

Where's the first place you'd take visitors to your college's campus?

 Dana Mortensen Illinois @danamarie26	According to the man himself, it's Mikel "I Earned My Scholarship" Leshoure. Pretty self-explanatory.	The dirtiest, smelliest, greatest place on campus—Kam's, home of the drinking Illini.
 Jim Hoff Indiana @jhoff	Ted "Touchdown" Bolser. He tied the IU record for most touchdowns in a season by a tight end.	It's a toss-up—there are so many good places to choose. Assembly Hall. The Union. Nick's.
 Tony Gatz Iowa @tonygatz	The Clayborn Supremacy. Senior defensive end Adrian Clayborn leads one of the top D-lines in the country.	Joe's Place. It's a bar in the middle of campus, great people, good times there.
 Victor H. Soto Michigan @vicsoto	Shoelace. The kid doesn't tie his shoelaces and yet he's still faster than every Hawkeyes football player.	Michigan Stadium. The biggest, bestest stadium in all the land. Iowa is going down this weekend.
 Julie Adamski Michigan State @JulieThereseA	Forget a star player. Just name the whole team The Unstoppables.	The Sparty statue. There's nothing like standing at the feet of glory.
 Bekki Chapman Minnesota @bekkijc	Goldy Gopher, because he's the most entertaining thing on the field these days.	The new football stadium. We don't have to play in the Metrodome anymore!
 Campbell Roth Northwestern @soupgirl	According to NU blogger @hailtopurple, students nicknamed our QB "Prince of Persia." Nerd alert.	The lake shore! If you haven't seen Lake Michigan from Evanston ... you're probably OK.
 Brad Obermeyer Ohio State @SirBardley	Terrelle "LeBron in cleats" Pryor. More so for the on-field talent than off-field integrity.	The Shoe or the Oval.
 Ian Patrick Penn State @NittLion78	Wide receiver Devon Smith, nicknamed "Great Gazoo" for his big helmet and small body.	Spot near Hetzel Union Building where I once saw LaVar Arrington actually carrying a textbook.
 Andrea Bailiff Purdue @acbailiff	Ryan Kerrigan is by far our star player. Is "Nancy" a good nickname?	Harry's Chocolate Shop, but to truly experience a football game, The Breakfast Club is a must.
 Blair Vender Wisconsin @Blender86	John "Feet of" Clay. Easy target.	Union Terrace. Where else can bookworms and party-goers enjoy views and live music with beer in hand?

Owen & Engine cheat sheet

Good for: Dates, after-work drinks

Crowd: Couples, double daters, beer snobs, post-movie pals

Cash: Expect to spend anywhere from $15-$35 on an entree

Music: Varies, but a hefty portion of the Muse catalog was played on our visit

Wear: Casual or date wear

Full steam ahead

Owen & Engine creates a pub template for discriminating beer drinkers

INSIDE

 Off to a good start

replica. Past the facade's public house-style paneling, though, assumptions fade away. This is a pub for adults, a place eschewing loud music for the lull of conversation and shunning predictable vintage beer ads for sleek wainscoting and damask wallpaper. The beer menu is pages long, and the kitchen, well, don't expect sliders anytime soon.

Attention daters ... meet your post-movie dinner spot. Set across the street from Regal City North 14 theater, Owen & Engine is a natural choice for couples thanks to two floors of low lighting, prime tables for two and plenty of liquid courage: rotating cask ales, locally produced liquors, a generous wine selection and a few seasonal cocktails, including the slightly spicy Sangre de St. Nicholas ($10, made with port, vanilla-infused brandy, cinnamon and nutmeg).

It's abundantly clear that ... beverage director Andrew Algren takes his beer seriously. Hand-pumped engines drawing unfiltered beer from the cask cellar are prominently displayed on the bar, and 20 taps advertise brews from the UK, Austria, Belgium and the U.S., including North Coast, Two Brothers, Victory and Founder's brewing companies.

Prepare for sticker shock when ... you see the dinner menu. Bangers and mash for $15? Butter chicken with rice (right) for $21? Prices are initially daunting, though owners insist this isn't run-of-the-mill comfort food. The kitchen makes darn near everything from scratch, from tender bangers made with organic pork to the crispy chapati we used to soak up the chicken's spicy sauce. Fish is even flown in daily for the popular fish and chips ($15). Are quality house-made ingredients worth this amount? If you're out with friends for a beer and burger, maybe not. But if you're trying to impress a date, these tasty eats are easy to love and sized to leave room for beer. For a less expensive option, order small bites off the pub menu, available after 5 p.m.

Service felt ... exceptionally welcoming. Even in the first few days as dust still settled, servers were attentive, bartenders were knowledgeable and everyone felt easygoing and happy to be working, as if the owners hired their cool, indie-rock friends and are letting you in on the party.

You've gotta check out ... the upstairs lounge, covered with artful damask wallpaper and thick wood trim. A killer fireplace and leather furniture set a tone that feels slightly cozier than downstairs, making this a go-to spot if you're here to sip and chat. Pre-holiday note: Call to reserve this floor's sectioned-off group table at the front of the room for your holiday meal with friends.

We'll be back for ... the beer. This impressive list is seasonal and thoughtfully local all the way to its cask engines, which currently include The Bitter End pale ale from Two Brothers Brewing Co. in Warrenville, Ill.

The bottom line ... A great date place with beautiful decor and lots of beer. The food might seem pricey, so eat before you go if you want to eat cheap or stay later and try the small-bites menu.

 SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... Berlin, 954 W. Belmont Ave.

We checked out Berlin on Oct. 7 for the second anniversary of the almost-anything-goes party Stardust and Chi-town debut of the retro British DJ team, Horse Meat Disco. BY CRAIG SEYMOUR

Daniel Fabry
22, hairdresser/colorist

What brings you out tonight?
It's straight-up party time, the two-year anniversary of Stardust. They always bring the party, man. Berlin is where Thursday nights are always at. It doesn't matter what you look like, what you wear, what you do. It's a party all the time and I love it.

What's the best part about being 22?
Double the twos, double the booze.

What are you drinking?
PBR. It's cheap and easy, just like my men.

Julian Upton
23, works at Barneys New York

What are you drinking?
I had a Blue Long Island.

What made you come here tonight?
I came out with a couple of friends. It's [a] fun crowd, fun setting. Very outgoing, disco-ish.

Is disco corny or cool?
It's cool in its own way.

Samantha Loo
25, social worker

Do you come here a lot?
I typically come here on the weekend when there's an event.

How would you describe the vibe of the club?
It's a fun dance party.

Do people ask you for advice a lot since you're a social worker?
Yes.

What's your best advice for someone in a bad relationship?
If you know it's not right for you, get out now.

New releases

Antony & the Johnsons

"Swanlights"

Secretly Canadian

While Belle & Sebastian's sleepy new "Write About Love" finds the Scottish crew buffing the most interesting elements from its music, Antony Hegarty—the sexually ambiguous, Nina Simone-voiced force driving Antony & the Johnsons—keeps mining damaged beauty from a familiar formula.

"The Great White Ocean," a brooding hymn that combines little more than delicate, finger-picked guitar and Hegarty's haunting pipes, certainly shares some DNA with "Spiralling," a track off the singer's ageless debut, "I Am a Bird Now." Likewise, Hegarty still finds himself enamored with transformation, though his concerns here are less earthly (the male-female transition was a running theme early on) and more spiritual—as in, "What happens as we pass from this world to the next?" A fragile "The Spirit Was Gone" doesn't stumble onto any easy answers, but the way Hegarty describes the gentle ballet separating soul and body is as close as any theologian or philosopher could hope to aspire in that search.

SONG

'Save Me'

By Coriz (pronounced "Chorus")
Listen at redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles

Coriz's rich, throaty vocals took her to top in this week's battle for Chicago's most talented music artists. The singer's neo-soul sound edged out the also-impressive Alicia "The Real Ya Yah" Townsend and her track "Save Me," a love song voters described as silky smooth. Vote in future bouts every Monday. KYRA KYLES, REDEYE

DVD

'The Hangover: Extreme Edition'

Available now

Doug (Justin Bartha) is only two days away from getting married. To celebrate, he and buddies Phil and Stu (Bradley Cooper and Ed Helms), along with future brother-in-law, Alan (Zach Galifianakis), drive to Las Vegas for one last big party. The only problem is the next morning, no one can remember what happened the night before. As if that isn't enough, the groom is missing. DOUG NYE, MCT

FASHION

Opening Ceremony Peacoat Skirt

$312 at Saks Fifth Avenue

Every woman needs to reserve space in her closet for the classic, camel-colored peacoat. Why not try the favorite in mini-skirt form? Paired with tights and boots for fall weather, this skirt gives prep with a twist. Blair Waldorf would approve! JOANNA GUSTAFSON FOR REDEYE

TV

'30 Rock'

7:30 p.m. Thursday, NBC

Tina Fey and Co. are doing their first live shows tonight, and that troubles Jack McBrayer, who plays page Kenneth Parcell. "Sometimes if we mess up lines or something, a knee-jerk reaction is to swear," he told Reuters. "I'm kind of worried about swearing." In the episode, Liz deals with her 40th birthday while Jack Donaghy (Alec Baldwin) tries to give up drinking and Tracy Jordan (Tracy Morgan) starts to act up on live TV. Uh-oh, that also should worry the company. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Celebrity three-peats we don't want to see

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Breaking up wasn't hard to do in Hollywood this week, as Courteney Cox, Christina Aguilera and Laura Dern split from husbands David Arquette, Jordan Bratman and Ben Harper, respectively, eonline.com reports. This spooky trifecta mirrors the myth that celebrities die in threes, a la Michael Jackson, Farrah Fawcett and Ed McMahon in June 2009. Here are a few other places non-time-sensitive celebrity trifectas could pop up—not that we want them to. GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

Celebrities in solitary confinement

Famous people in the slammer is nothing new, but when Lil Wayne was moved to solitary confinement earlier this month for possession of contraband, it was cause for a little commotion. We're glad to see celebs aren't always being given cushy jail treatment, and it would do Lindsay Lohan and Paris Hilton some good to spend a little time by themselves if they end up behind bars again. No hair extensions allowed.

Elderly actress comebacks

We thought it was pretty awesome when Betty White started taking over the globe earlier this year, decades after her "Golden Girls" star rose, but we're afraid the novelty has hit overload. Who's the next mega-watt octogenarian? Tina Louise and Dawn Wells, aka Ginger and Mary Ann from "Gilligan's Island," are due for a resurgence—maybe on "Hawaii Five-O" as wise cops.

Awards show speech interruptions

Kanye West obviously kicked this one off with his infamous Taylor Swift mic-swiipe in 2009, and was followed in March by a film producer hijacking an Oscar speech. We hope celebs have learned by now that this is an entirely classless move—unless you're pulling a reverse-hijack on Kanye.

Heidi Montag plastic surgeries

After getting a boob job in 2007 and an even more ridiculous boob job (and more) in 2009, it'd be tough for Heidi not to look like she's had more work done than the Belmont Red Line stop. The only way we'd approve of this trifecta is if she gets a major down-sizing—which she told Life & Style Magazine she desperately wants. So do we.

Here comes the Brand

Will the bride wear Elmo? Katy Perry and Russell Brand (above) will wed next week in India, at the same hotel where Brand proposed to Perry in January, eonline.com reports. The celebration will be a days-long extravaganza attended by friends such as Rihanna and her boyfriend, Matt Kemp, the website reports. GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

Now batting: Tom Hardy

It's no dream: Tom Hardy (left), who played Eames in Christopher Nolan's "Inception," is in talks to reunite with the "Dark Knight" director in the next "Batman" film, deadline.com reports. There's no word on what role Hardy would play, but if you ask us, the British actor would be a worthy adversary for Christian Bale's Batman.

Baldwin fights back

Alec Baldwin didn't appreciate AOL's characterization of his snarky gift basket to "Big Bang Theory" star Jim Parsons for winning a best actor Emmy, but Baldwin isn't signing off from AOL just yet. "I'm still a loyal AOL user. In spite of the fact that its homepage content is written by the dumbest bastards in the world," Baldwin wrote in an essay for The Huffington Post.

Stewart's rally etiquette

Get ready to rally (and march). Jon Stewart announced Tuesday that Comedy Central plans a live TV and online broadcast Oct. 30 of his Rally to Restore Sanity and Stephen Colbert's March to Keep Fear Alive. As far as event guidelines go, Stewart wants no nudity, throwing stuff or fascism. Basically, he said on Tuesday's "Daily Show," "When in doubt, don't be douchey."

Hide your remotes

Antoine who? The BET Hip-Hop Awards, which taped weeks ago and aired Tuesday night, featured a surprise performance by Antoine Dodson (left), the inspiration behind the Auto-Tuned summer Internet sensation "Bed Intruder." Also at the awards, Jay-Z and Alicia Keys took home the award for best hip-hop video for "Empire State of Mind," and CD of the year went to Jay-Z for "The Blueprint 3." GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Celebrity gossip blogger Perez Hilton says he's done with bullying. After making that pledge Wednesday on "The Ellen DeGeneres Show," Hilton told Out magazine, "I'm still going to be sassy and critical, but there's a different way I can do that. I don't have to call people names. I don't have to out people. I don't have to draw inappropriate things on them. I don't have to go for the cheap joke."

THE DIGIT

That's when Michael Jackson's complete catalog of 40 music videos will be released on DVD, billboard.com reported. The price for the DVD, "Michael Jackson's Vision," was not available.
